THE PROBLEM

It's no secret Louisiana is almost always last when it comes to health. However, many of the things making us sick can be changed right here in our own communities. In fact, where we live, work, and play has the greatest influence on our health over the course of a lifetime. Through healthy policies and improvements to our built environment, we have the potential to improve our communities AND help them thrive – we just have to tap in!

THE SOLUTION

LHCC's approach strategically supports motivated individuals and groups to improve their own communities' health and wellbeing. We're all realizing that working together can not only improve health, but we can make progress on so much more. We're zooming out and working to make communities safer, more sustainable, and accessible. Improving walkability, bikeability, and green space can even improve local economies. We now understand that together, we do and accomplish more. And LHCC – seeing the growth and power of local communities in those battles – provides a network that helps unite, train, support, and leverage their work so communities can excel at what they do best: Making healthy change from the ground up.
